General Comment

What I am against is that the health plans offer contraceptives without co-pays or deductibles as free birth control. Currently women who want birth control coverage pay for it through their premiums and or also have a co-pay or out-of-pocket expense. Under the new mandate they will still pay for it, but the cost will be buried in the overall premium and everyone else, including churches and other religious employers as well as individual Catholics will be forced to pay for it in their premiums too.

Since I am opposed to abortion and birth control, it is not right that I and others with religious objections will be forced by this proposal to subsidize things that we are morally opposed to.
Thank you
